OUTBACK NEW SOUTH WALES

Where I want to go!

With their rich palettes of colours and wonderful variety of textures and shapes, desert landscapes have long provided inspiration for artists and photographers alike.

Which is why the Corner Country of western New South Wales is a perfect choice for setting up your easel or tripod.

The Corner Country has it all. Rugged, purple hills and gullies. Ancient ephemeral creeks and plateaus broken by tortured trees. Ochre coloured sand dunes and cerulean skies. Vast open spaces stretching to a far horizon. Picture perfect landscapes.

Whether travelling alone or in a group, just head north from Broken Hill along any of the roads to the Corner Country and you will be well and truly on the right track.

Right across the area are places to stay and work including station properties where you can set up in shearer's quarters. Tours of the area, and meals, can be arranged.

Its quiet, solitary even, and truly inspirational.

So, pack the pencils and brushes, pick up the tripod and camera, and head on out to the Corner Country.
